ANATOMY OF A DRUMSTICK

TIP

Shape and size are critical to your sound! Always consider surface area. Tip shapes and sizes that create a broad surface area will generate a wider palette of complex sounds, whereas smaller surface areas create bright, tight and precise sounds.

NECK

Area just before the tip and the thinnest part of the stick.

SHOULDER

The precise spot where the shaft begins to taper into the neck.

SHAFT

Smack a good rim shot on your snare. The shaft is the area that takes the most impact.

BUTT

The entire profile of a Zildjian stick is formed on a centerless grinder - not just the tip! A stone ground butt-end is more comfortable in the hand and provides better consistency for players who like to flip their sticks around for a strong backbeat!

TAPER

The single biggest contributor to feel and response. Longer tapers make a stick feel fast and responsive. Shorter tapers add power and help you really lay into the drums and cymbals.

LENGTH

Longer sticks provide added reach and a slightly more front-heavy feel. Shorter sticks tend to be more agile.

WHEN THE STICK IS RIGHT, EVERYTHING ELSE FALLS INTO PLACE.

Use our STICK SELECTION GUIDE on the next page to find your perfect stick! Mix and match lengths, tapers and tip shapes for a feel and sound that's all your own.
